Department of Modern Languages and Literatures (<https://cas.umw.edu/modernlanguages/>)

The German minor is designed to provide the student with an advanced level of language proficiency augmented by a basic knowledge and familiarity with the culture and literature of Germany. In addition to the minor's required German language courses or their equivalents, students are able to select 300- and 400-level courses in German culture, literature and applied language. Students may also include individual study (GERM 491, GERM 492) and three-credit internships (GERM 499) as part of their minor programs. Approved German courses from study abroad programs may also be included among the electives of the German minor.
